Financial Industry Regulatory Authority

The Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA) is an independent, non-governmental organization that writes and enforces the rules governing registered brokers and broker-dealer firms in the United States. Its stated mission is "to safeguard the investing public against fraud and bad practices."¹ It is considered a self-regulatory organization.

FINRA was created as the result of the consolidation of the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) and the member regulation, enforcement, and arbitration operations of the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) in 2007. The consolidation was meant to do away with overlapping or redundant regulation and reduce the cost and complexity of compliance.

Benefits of FINRA

FINRA's main benefit is to protect investors from potential abuses and ensure ethical conduct within the financial industry. FINRA resources, such as Broker-Check, allow investors to determine if someone claiming to be a broker is actually a member in good standing.

This certificate was issued to www.fxbrooks.com on the 21st of August 2020.
